Camp Fire Girls Form New Group

A new Camp Fire Girls group is being formed in Campbell under the leadership of Mrs. Cyril Collett who will be their guardian. Mrs. Dave Ribble and Miss Helen Stray will act as advisors for the group. A social meeting in the form of a picnic to be held at the Los Gatos park is being planned to organize the group. Those expected to attend will be Nina Page, Barbara Evans, Geraldine Morley, Maryland and Helen Lobrovich, and Elizabeth Naylor.

They welcome any other girls who are nearly the same age and are interested in becoming Camp Fire girls in their group. Such girls are cordially invited to talk with Mrs. Collett at her home on the corner of Page and Campbell avenues, and to sign up with her to attend the picnic. All will meet at her home on next Monday afternoon, August 29 at 3 p. m. From there they will go to the Los Gatos park in private cars driven by the parents of some of the girls.

Davison Speaker At Celebration

Superior Court Judge Charles W. Davison who is Past Department Commander for California of the United Spanish-American war veterans, was speaker on Sunday, August 14, at the celebration of "Manila Day" at the Yountville State Soldiers home, where they annually observe the fall of Manila. Judge Davison said that the end of Spanish rule over her colonies marked the entrance of western civilization into the Orient.

William Harrison of San Jose, and junior department commander for California of the organization was chairman of the day. Many veterans from San Jose attended the services.

Judge Davison was also orator of the day at a meeting of the Spanish war veterans in Palo Alto on Monday evening.

Howard K. Smith of North Third street returned Tuesday evening from Brentwood where he had been staying with his aunt while employed on his brother Ray's farm.

More Money For School Grounds

Announcement was made Tuesday of federal approval of a WPA variety of recreational and vocational improvements at the new Campbell Union High school.

It is estimated that these improvements, which include construction of a new shop, landscaping of the grounds, razing of old buildings, making tennis and handball courts, a running track, football and baseball bleachers, driveways, walks, curbs, fences, sprinkler system and planting of lawns, will employ 190 men for about a year.

The WPA supplies $152,328 and the remaining $38,363 will come from the district's general fund. Mrs. Jessie Shelley, clerk of the school board stated.

The present high school buildings which are nearing completion have been erected by a PWA grant of $109,000 and a bond issue of $135,000.

The fall term is scheduled to begin Sept. 19, with an anticipated increase in attendance due to the greatly improved facilities and reduction of fire hazards.

L. D. Bohnett Endorses Foley

Added support was given to the candidacy of John D. Foley for State Senator with the announcement that L. D. Bohnett, San Jose attorney and former city attorney of Willow Glen is urging his election.

In a recent letter to Mr. Lewis Hayd Leve, of Palo Alto, Mr. Bohnett said:

In response to your invitation to me to act as chairman of a Foley-for-Senator meeting in Palo Alto next Thursday evening, I regret to say that I expect to be out of town the latter part of next week, so that it will be impossible for me to be with you. However, I appreciate the invitation, and under other circumstances, would be glad to preside.

There is no doubt in my mind but what Mr. Foley will receive the Democratic nomination and I believe that as a Democratic nominee he will be elected Senator in November. I shall be glad to support him and urge his election.

JOSEPH McKINNON (EDITORIAL)

For years "Joe" McKinnon has been a force to be reckoned with in Santa Clara County. He has been supervisor of District 4 but his influence has extended far beyond the bounds of his district.

The fact that Santa Clara County has one of the finest county hospitals in the country is in part due to McKinnon's ability as an administrator and his interest in the hospital. He has likewise had an important part in maintaining the county's roads in excellent condition.

McKinnon has acted as the county's representative on many official bodies and on many occasions—always to the credit of the county.

That he has made some enemies is not surprising, for no active and forceful man fails to make a few enemies. It can be said, however, that his friends outnumber his critics ten to one.

The News believes it to be for the county's best of interests that "Joe" McKinnon be re-elected.—San Jose News.

HOLLIS LOUGHRAN COUNTY MANAGER FOR ROSBOROUGH

Hollis J. Loughran, well known Santa Clara newspaperman, and managing editor of the Santa Clara County Review of San Jose has been named county manager for Joseph J. Rosborough, Democratic candidate for state treasurer.

Loughran is well known in the county, where he attended Santa Clara high school and graduated from Bellarmine college preparatory. Rosborough served as postmaster of Oakland during President Wilson's term.

Trusting that you will have a successful meeting and that you will get a big vote for Mr. Foley, I am,

Sincerely yours,
L. D. Bohnett.

BARTON WOOD TO TEACH AT RIO VISTA

Barton Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Wood, until a short time ago residents of McCoy avenue, but now living in Gilroy, has accepted a position in the Rio Vista high school, where he will teach English, mathematics and glee club singing.

Barton is a Campbell high alumnus and a graduate of San Jose State college where he won distinction in writing both prose and poetry. He acquired his teaching credentials at the University of California.

George Desin Offers His Pledge

The campaign for the primary election is about to close. George Desin, candidate for coroner and public administrator feels that I have conducted a clean and vigorous campaign in his behalf, devoid of personalities, in spite of the fact that he is opposed by six candidates.

One candidate had held this office for 16 years. In his propaganda he asks the voters to vote for the "Proven Candidate," and not for the job seekers. This is absurd and unethical. Was this gentleman a proven candidate for the first time when he was a candidate for the office. No, no more than any candidate who hasn't been in office before, and isn't he a job seeker in spite of the fact that he was defeated at the last election by over 5000 votes and has one of the most prosperous undertaking establishments in the county.

George Desin offers you his pledge in the most honest way, that if elected he will devote his entire time to his duties and not be interested in any private business but be at your service at all times.

George Desin asks for your support. He is a young man born in Campbell and raised in the county. He states he will prove himself efficient, honest, qualified and deserving, whatever you may do for him. THANK YOU.

Bradford Blagdon Drowns at Santa Cruz Saturday

The death by drowning of Bradford Blagdon off Lighthouse Point at Santa Cruz was a tragedy of Saturday. Blagdon was fishing off the rocks early in the morning and slipped when casting his line.

His small sister, Ila, was the only witness, and she ran for the light house keeper who searched in vain until the water police arrived. The body was not recovered after a day's search, and authorities stated that several persons drowned in the heavy surf in that region have never been found.

Mrs. Una Blagdon, mother of the young man, with her son and the sister had moved recently from Campbell where she had a home on North Third street.

Others of the family are brothers, Edwin, Roswell and Ellis, all employed away from home.

Committees Of High PTA Meet

A joint meeting of the program committee and executive board of the Campbell High school P. T. A. was held at the home of the program chairman, Mrs. Frank Blair, on Thursday afternoon, August 18. The program for the ensuing year was definitely outlined and it was decided to work under the slogan "Know Your School" with particular attention being given not only to acquainting parents with the new school building, but also the methods used in presenting modern education to high school students. The membership was also opened with 13 new members as a start. Anyone wishing to join for the year will please get in touch with Mrs. Farnham, Campbell 58-F-3. All parents and friends of high school students are given a cordial invitation to join.

The following were in attendance at the meeting:

Mrs. E. A. Howe, M. H. Farnham, E. L. Farnham, Frank Lopes, T. J. Armstrong, W. L. Bachman, E. E. Coonradt, M. F. Hughes, R. C. Hughes, F. A. Jacobson, Ray Wood, Frank Blair. Mrs. C. E. Williams, president of El Paradiso council was a guest for the afternoon. The final meeting of the summer session will be held at the home of Mrs. Frank Lopes, Stevens Creek road, Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 14.

Rumor False States Thomas

"There has been considerable controversy and rumor that if Mr. John P. Fitzgerald is elected district attorney, I will become his chief deputy," said Fred L. Thomas, district attorney, yesterday. "There is absolutely no truth in such a rumor."

"At the end of my term I shall sever all connections with the district attorney's office, and under no circumstances will I accept an appointment therein. I made this position clear when I told my deputies that I did not intend to seek re-election."

"Concerning Mr. Fitzgerald, I would like to state here and now, that he is without any doubt in my mind, one of the most capable, experienced, and fearless candidates to ever run for the office of district attorney in this state. Santa Clara county will make no mistake in retaining Mr. Fitzgerald for district attorney." Mr. Thomas concluded his interview by saying that voters of Santa Clara county could do themselves a real justice by studying the qualifications of the candidates running for district attorney.

Mr. and Mrs. Hans Hansen are happy in having their infant daughter, Carol Louise, at home, after a period of five weeks, during which she was an incubator baby at the San Jose hospital.

Weighing but 4 pounds and 2 ounces at birth, she has now attained to 6 pounds and is gaining steadily.

Carl B. Field transacted business in San Francisco Wednesday.

Merrill Collett Outlines Work Of P.A. Bureau

Merrill Collett, who was introduced to the Kiwanis members by his brother, Cyril Collett, at Tuesday's meeting clearly outlined the work of the public administration bureau of which he is an employee.

As it was a prerequisite of the bureau that a public official be present, the club had invited Supervisor Joseph McKinnon to attend. However, several of the incumbent public officials who are candidates for re-election were present.

Collett explained that the bureau was created in 1933 by means of funds granted by the Rockefeller Institute. It has worked with local officials for the improvement of government routine.

Elaine Jeffers entertained with two piano solos. Willard Van Dyke will be the speaker next week; his subject, "Poultry Producing."

Armstrong's Nine- Point Platform

Believing that his lifelong background as a businessman and rancher in this valley has qualified him for public office, Lewis W. Armstrong is seeking election to the position of supervisor in the fourth district.

Mr. Armstrong is running on a nine-point platform which includes consolidation of road districts for more production and better results, a merit system for county employees other than elective officials, elimination of the costly almshouse and transferring of inmates to more satisfactory pensions, county hospitalization for those entitled to it, modern accounting methods in all county offices, competitive purchasing, elimination of waste, installation of system of budgetary control, administration of pensions and relief in accordance with the spirit as well as the wording of the law.

Mrs. A. W. Wellington, president of the Campbell Union Grammar School P. T. A. will entertain the members of the executive board at her home on Infirmary road, Monday afternoon, August 29 at 2:30 o'clock. Important business for the coming year will be discussed.

Mr. and Mrs. John P. Duncan left last Saturday for Galt, where John has accepted the principalship of the grammar school.

Runciman Master of Squeeze Play

NEW YORK.—When Sir Walter Runciman was here in 1937, it was reported that he was trying to persuade Washington to lend money to Germany, to soothe Hitler and make him stop frightening England. That may or may not have been his mission, but, as a master of the old credit-and-raw-materials squeeze play, he works that way, and, now, as Viscount Runciman, he is deep in the Downing Street strategy which swings these two cudgels of empire. Prime Minister Chamberlain appointed him as mediator in the Czechoslovak-Sudeten German negotiations, but the Czechs toned that down to adviser.

Viscount Runciman has been a silent ally of Viscount Halifax in the quiet, glacial-pressure advance of the four-power bloc scheme for a European coalition and the final and complete isolation of Russia.

It was reported from London, unverified so far as this writer knows, that it was he who put over a fast credit double-play with France and Italy, the moment the Daladier government came in, and he has been tagged as the man who deploys the empire's financial resources in the diplomatic chess game.

His father was a ruddy old sea dog who sang chanteys, a cabin boy who became a shipping czar and a baronet. Viscount Runciman is a pallid, tight-lipped little man, a total abstainer, a former Sunday School teacher, and a faithful chapel-goer.

As president of the British board of trade, he made concessions in empire free trade, but he is a protectionist of the Chamberlain tradition. Like many men of small stature, he has the Napoleonic psychosis, writing books about Napoleon and hoarding memorabilia.

THIS writer has heard from several assured but not necessarily authoritative sources that Tullio Serafin would succeed Edward Johnson as manager of the Metropolitan Opera.

Serafin To Boss The Met?

Signor Serafin has been highly esteemed here for his musicianship, but all was not well between him and the Metropolitan management when he returned to Rome in 1935, after a number of years as Italian conductor here.

"The Metropolitan has not kept pace with the artistic progress of the modern stage," he said, on his arrival in Rome. "The way opera is put on at the Metropolitan is ridiculous. . . . The great fault with the Metropolitan is the little encouragement it is giving to its latent talent."

The Metropolitan reply hinted that Signor Serafin was really thinking about money rather than art. In the season '32-'33, he had a fair subsistence wage of $58,200 for the season. This had been worked down to $34,000 the year he left.

He did indicate that he thought that was pretty shabby pay for an ace conductor, but insisted his criticism was directed solely at artistic shortcomings.

Several years ago, the Metropolitan was intent on national self-sufficiency in music.

Home Talent For Opera No Bargain

It was going to discover and nurture native talent. That hasn't quite come off, and there have been the usual number of importations. It will be interesting if it brings in not only a European manager, but one who is its sharpest critic.

Among music lovers of this writer's acquaintance, there seems to be great indifference about where the singers come from as long as they are good. They insist that music, above all, must be free from the sharply nationalistic trends of the day.

As a lad, Tullio Serafin laid down a shepherd's crook for a baton. Tending the sheep near Cavazere on the Venetian mainland, he used to walk several miles to town on Saturday night, at the age of ten, to conduct the village band. He attended the conservatory at Milan and was a fully-fledged conductor in his early youth.

At La Scala, in Milan, he was assistant conductor under Gatti-Casazza. He became one of the most widely known and popular conductors in Europe.

A staunch supporter of the Fascist regime from its outset, he has been conductor of the Royal Opera at Rome since his departure from New York. He was replaced here by Ettore Panizza.

'International Lawlessness' Deplored by Secretary Hull

By Joseph W. LaBine

International

Last week as neurotic Europe jittered and shivered, Adolf Hitler led 1,500,000 troops through unprecedented maneuvers. In England, there were signs that Neville Chamberlain's "kid glove" policy toward Germany and England was breaking down. In Shanghai, Japan made bold advances on the International Settlement. (See below).

Into such a troubled world stepped U. S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull to deplore once again the "tide of lawlessness." A good maker-of-points, Statesman Hull listed a seven-point international program to accomplish this aim: (1) economic reconstruction; (2) adherence to international law; (3) observance of treaties and their orderly modification when necessary; (4) abstention from use of force; (5) non-intervention with other nations' internal affairs; (6) disarmament; (7) collaboration for culture.

To America, Mr. Hull's speech was a warning that U. S. isolation is no longer possible. To European chancelleries it was intended to be a pep talk for internationalism. But as comment drifted back home next day from London, Berlin, Paris, Rome and Tokyo, it appeared Mr. Hull had only made his friends dearer, made his enemies stronger.

Berlin spoke of his "narrow mental horizon." Rome called him "idealistic and impracticable." Tokyo said his speech was a "repetition of his idealistic diplomacy which contains nothing not included in recent pronouncements." But from ally-hungry Paris and London came only praise.

Two days later Franklin Roosevelt found occasion to make another official U. S. utterance on Democracy vs. Dictatorship. At Ontario's Queens university, where he got an honorary degree, the President (1) extended the Monroe doctrine to Canada by promising that "the people of the U. S. will not stand idly by if domination of Canadian soil is threatened by another empire;" and (2) took a slap at Hitler, Mussolini, et al, by remarking: "We cannot prevent our people from having an opinion in regard to wanton brutality . . . undemocratic regimentation . . . misery inflicted on helpless peoples." To France this was proof that "the democracies of the world are standing together."

Foreign

Last February 20, dapper Anthony Eden resigned as Britain's foreign secretary because he didn't believe in consorting with dictators. But Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain set out to make friends with Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini. Appointed as Eden's successor was Viscount Halifax.

Next came conversations at Berlin and Rome, a British-Italian friendship pact, a plan to take foreigners out of the Spanish war, an avowal of peace from Hitler. Until last fortnight Neville Chamberlain was a success at winning friends and influencing people.

But a few days later his house of cards collapsed. Italy began anti-British propaganda despite her "friendship" agreement. Hitler massed 1,500,000 men for war maneuvers despite his peace avowal. Generalissimo Francisco Franco, Spain's rebel commander, balked at eliminating foreign fighters, presumably on advice from Berlin and Rome.

What was still more disheartening, Viscount Halifax met secretly with opinionated Anthony Eden and was reported ready to resign. Some thought Neville Chamberlain might also resign, placing weather-beaten Sir Samuel Hoare in line for the premiership.

At Cologne an anti-aircraft gun was planted in front of the U. S. consulate, barking every 20 minutes at an imaginary enemy in the sky. Throughout Germany, troop trains pulled reserves to the borders of France, Poland and Czechoslovakia for Adolf Hitler's 15-day war maneuvers. From many points, foreign observers sent word of wholesale rebellion among workers drafted for "state tasks."

Nowhere was this Nazi show of power more keenly felt than in little Czechoslovakia, where 400,000 troops were secretly mobilized to forestall a sudden invasion move by Germany. Meanwhile, England's Lord Runciman made little progress in his mission to settle the scrap between loyal Czechs and pro-Nazi Sudeten Germans. As negotiations reached an impasse, Sudeten Ernst Kundt warned the government that the "gap is unbridgeable."

Fortnight ago, Chinese nationalists in Shanghai celebrated the first anniversary of Japan's invasion by raising flags and waging guerrilla warfare. Result was an invasion of Shanghai's International Settlement by Jap secret service agents who were promptly spanked and sent home. Last week two French soldiers were seized and taken to the Japanese embassy where they were held despite protests.

Though Shanghai itself now lives peacefully under Tokyo rule, the foreign-owned International Settlement houses 1,000,000 Chinese still loyal to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. Shanghai diplomats feared that Japan might attempt to seize the settlement, a move that would send U. S., Great Britain and France into an outraged uproar.

Meanwhile, Tokyo tightened its belt once more, taking more economy measures to speed up the war in China. Hankow, long-sought objective, still remained 100 miles away from war weary Nipponese.

Business

Last week Secretary of State Cordell Hull reported satisfactory progress with his reciprocal trade treaty program whereby the U. S. becomes "most favored nation" with a host of governments. Then came a stumbling block, thrown in his path not by a foreign power but by Mr. Hull's next door neighbor, Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace.

In all the world there are wheat surpluses of 975 million bushels. Of this the U. S. has 325 million, Canada 250 million. Easily the biggest competitors in wheat export business, North America's "good neighbors" have made price-cutting moves against each other to sell a major part of the 400 million bushels the world export market needs this year.

What Secretary Wallace suggested last week was an "understanding" on wheat export policy with the Canadian government which has pegged No. 1 wheat at a minimum of 81 cents a bushel and agreed to absorb losses connected with export business. After he reaches an agreement, Secretary Wallace hopes to make a similar provision for U. S. exports, subsidy money to come from customs receipts.

Determined to dispose of at least 100 million bushels on the export market this year, Secretary Wallace might easily disrupt the reciprocal trade treaty by underbidding nations now operating under agreements with Secretary Hull.

Politics

This year, more than ever, state primary campaigns have brought complaints of "dirty poker." In Kentucky, both Sen. Alben Barkley and Gov. A. B. "Happy" Chandler were accused of misusing federal and state funds to influence voters. Investigating such charges last week, Sen. Morris Sheppard's committee on campaign expenditures found a particularly juicy morsel.

Uncovered in Pennsylvania were letters carrying Sen. Joseph F. Guffey's signature, urging WPA workers to contribute to campaign chests of Gov. George A. Earle, running for the senate, and C. Alvin Jones, running for governor.

Section 208 of the U. S. criminal code forbids solicitation by a federal officerholder of political funds from any person receiving federal compensation. Vehemently denying the charge, Senator Guffey's secretary nevertheless sped word across the Atlantic to his boss, who is touring Europe.

In Wyoming, a quiet primary nominated Gov. Leslie A. Miller, naming Nels H. Smith as his Republican opponent next November. Also renominated was Wyoming's only representative, Paul R. Grever, who will face Frank O. Horton, personal friend of Herbert Hoover.

Crime

In September, 1934, the body of a headless woman was washed ashore on Cleveland's Lake Erie front door. The next three and one-half years produced nine more headless bodies, seven of them men, two of them women. In each case, clues were maddeningly absent; always the same mutilation and cleavage of bodies, always the papers and boxes into which the pieces were packed, always the hopelessness of identification.

Last week, rummaging around a lake front dump, police stumbled on an eleventh victim, headless like the rest. Four hours of patient examination brought no clues. A few hours later crowds swarmed over the dump, uncovered a twelfth torso. Both were women; one may have been a Negro.

As police continued to seek the "mad butcher of Kingsbury Run" they knew only that he was a surgically skilled maniac who apparently has no other motive except a fiendish desire to dissect human bodies.

Sports

In New York's Madison Square Garden, 20,000 fight fans saw dusky Henry Armstrong enter a boxing ring wearing two crowns, world featherweight, world welterweight. In another corner sat Lou Ambers wearing one crown, world lightweight. For 15 rounds they fought at terrific pace as Henry Armstrong clearly held the edge. In the fifth, Ambers dropped under a crushing right. In the sixth he dropped again under a fusillade of rights. But in the thirteenth he fought Armstrong to a standstill.

At fight's end, Henry Armstrong left the ring wearing three crowns instead of two, the first man in boxing history to hold three titles at one time. But from the audience came jeers, boos, catcalls, straw hats, cigar butts and pop bottles.

Domestic

"I am quite confident that he is superior in learning and ability to anyone else available and that his character is equal to his gifts. He has been a dear friend of mine for many years, but I am confident that the judgment I express is not the child but the parent of my affection."

Thus, in 1932, wrote the late beloved Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes regarding Harvard's Felix Frankfurter, whom he wanted appointed to the Massachusetts Supreme court. But famed Jurist Frankfurter declined the offer and

FELIX FRANKFURTER
"He is superior in learning . . ."

Justice Holmes died. So did another great liberal, Justice Benjamin Cardozo.

To fill Justice Cardozo's post was a job confronting Franklin Roosevelt last week. Since the court already has a liberal majority he would not find it necessary to consider that factor. Some thought a westerner should have the job for reasons of geographical distribution. Others thought it should go to a Jew or Catholic for religious reasons.

Though no appointment was expected before congress reconvenes, pro-Frankfurter sentiment was growing rapidly in Washington. First to climb the bandwagon was Nebraska's Sen. George Norris. Most observers thought Felix Frankfurter would make a good addition to the high court.

Army

Last week, as Adolf Hitler paraded his manpower before the world and England's Leslie Hore-Belisha began "streamlining" Great Britain's army, many an American wondered about his own national defense. To their surprise, investigators learned that U. S. army officials are placing an accent on youth, are moreover tightening efficiency strings.

New regulations require periodic reports on major generals and 12,500 officers below that grade. And, because a score of majors and brigadier generals reach retirement age this year, a wholesale reshuffling of upper ranks is in progress.

But to Maj. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, attending Third army maneuvers at Camp Bullis, Texas, officers were only part of the problem. Said he: "The No. 1 problem facing the United States today from a military standpoint is manpower, which is the worst in our history. There are five reasons, in this order: graft, crime, health, illiteracy and venereal disease."

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG WASHINGTON, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—Something like a year ago, quite a furor was raised here by the revelation that the Home Owners Loan Corporation had loaned $40,000 out of its own treasury to its employees who wanted to organize a group which could hire its own doctors on an annual basis. This was public money, because the HOLC is wholly owned by the federal treasury and its function is to loan money on private homes to encourage home ownership. The Group Health association, as it was named, guaranteed medical treatment to its members for a fixed annual fee and hired doctors to do the job.

There was a roar from many quarters at the time because of the use of government money in this manner, but the loudest roar came from the doctors who are members of the District of Columbia Medical society. Few of us realized then, I think, where this controversy was going to lead. I doubt that there were very many persons expected to see the tiny spark fanned into a flame so large. Now, however, that spark has become a national flame, national issue of serious import. For what could be more serious, indeed, than a chance to live when the cold fingers of death creep closer?

The issue as it is now defined, succinctly, is whether the long and honorable history of the medical profession, and all of the scientific assets that this implies, shall be thrown to the winds; whether, in the place of that history and gain and the services of those individual doctors, there shall be created a new basic method, a procedure where the doctors are hired by a corporation subsisting on the annual fees paid by its members who will telephone the corporation offices and say: send me one of your best doctors. In short, as I see it, the issue is whether there is to be personalized, conscientious service or service as lacking in personal interest as a "fill my tank, please," at the gasoline service station.

That is the preface to the recent legal proceedings by our own government against the American Medical association and the District of Columbia Medical society, which are threatened with prosecution as a "trust." The government's action, of course, makes the controversy a national issue, one which interests all of us. The trust busting assistant attorney general, Thurman Arnold, former Yale professor, vows he will break up the "trust" which is the national organization of doctors, but there are those of us who cannot help linking the corporation method of medical practice with Professor Arnold's blast and threats against the doctors who believe in individual practice.

The whole department of justice position strikes me as rather fuzzy, rather asinine and, in some respects, reprehensible. However, if there is to be a complete analysis made and a complete understanding of the situation obtained, it is necessary to know that "President Roosevelt wants it done," and Mr. Arnold is proceeding. It does not seem to matter that there are only a few medical crooks, only a few unethical and unscrupulous medical practitioners; the whole profession must be attacked and defamed. Nor does it seem of great concern to the prosecuting officials that some of those doctors who are promoting corporation medicine throughout the United States have been denied admission to the American Medical association for reasons of character and ethics deemed sufficient to warrant non-recognition.

And while I am about it, I want to pay tribute to that greatest of all American characters, the country doctor. I have personal reasons for offering my humble praise to one of their number, but throughout America there can be found no greater asset. He is a friend and confidant and adviser, minister to the body and the mind. There are some among his numbers that will not have, even do not warrant, respect. But that obtains in every walk of life and my belief is that there are fewer country doctors lacking in honesty and good conscience than in any regular profession or avocation of life.

The country doctor is different from his brother practitioner of the city. The latter probably is better trained, more up to date on all developments of science, perhaps more expert in most fields, but I think I can say without equivocation or doubt because of personal experience that the country doctor is not excelled anywhere among humans for good, common horse sense. And the man or woman who is equipped with horse sense keeps the human race on an even keel.

But to get back to the government proceedings: here we see an action, or threat, against a whole profession that has done as much or more for mankind as the ministers of the gospel. I take it for granted that there are skeletons in the closets of many doctors. There is, and can be, no justification, for example, of some of the high fees charged in cases where people without worldly goods are concerned. Their lives are as valuable as the lives of the richest multimillionaires. There can be no defense, as a further proposition, for laxness and disinterest which are matters of record. But I maintain and shall always believe that there are comparatively few members of the medical profession who fail to give the best that is in them. And when I mention disinterest, I cannot help wondering whether doctors hired by group health associations are going to be much concerned about hurrying to the bedside of an association member after a few years of such practice. The monthly check is going to come in whether the corporation doctor is sympathetic and skillful or apathetic.

But let us get on to another phase; two of them, in fact.

According to the best legal opinion that is available outside of the department of justice, it seems likely that no court will hold the medical society to be a "trust." The organization of doctors is effected for the purpose of maintaining high standards, to keep racketeers out of the profession. Its members must be of good character; they must adhere to rules that are designed for the protection of the layman who obviously is at the mercy of the man trained in the science of medicine and surgery. The whole purpose seems to be the very simple proposition of self-discipline. (I might say just here that New Dealers all along have called for self-discipline among business and professional men.) The medical men want to destroy the type that feeds upon the hopeless individual's desire to regain health, to live; they want to rid society of the abortionist, the quacks and the men and women who traffic in blood. And the question I propound, therefore, is: can such a profession be catalogued in law or in morals as dealers in commodities like steel or oil or calico? If it can be so held under our laws, then there surely is no point in young men and women slaving through six or seven or eight years of training for the profession. They had better go out and start practicing medicine as the unskilled laborer digs ditches.

In this connection, too, it seems proper to mention an implication of a decision holding the medical societies to be trusts. As set down above, membership is based on character and training. If the medical society is a trust, what are all of your fraternal organizations, your civic societies, your clubs, who elect or fail to elect members because of good character or lack of it? The Masonic order, the Odd Fellows, Woodmen of the World? And, what of Knights of Columbus? That great organization for good also could be broken down if a crook, for selfish reasons, would want membership.

And now to the politics of the situation. It appears to me to be a great tactical blunder on the part of the so-called board of strategy which has President Roosevelt's ear. Those men, most of them untrained in political campaigning, have failed to recognize the human element that is involved. They have listened to the generalities of those who have their own nests to feather and have so far forgotten common sense in politics as to propose a move that can be offset by direct, personal contact.

Let us think of the picture here presented in a hypothetical case. Suppose you are a great supporter of President Roosevelt, believe him to be sincere in his announced interest in the masses, praise his courage and his forward-looking program for government. Along comes Old Man Sickness and lays you down flat on your back. Your doctor comes. You know him, have confidence in him, or you would not call him.

Then, after the manner that usually happens, the doctor talks about a number of things with you. Of course, you know something about the government attacks on the doctors and you want to hear the story from the other angle. I would, and so would you. What is all of this about, Doctor? Is there such a thing as a medical trust?

Well, unless I miss my guess, unless my understanding of human relations is as wet as swamp log—you are going to feel that the whole proceeding is quite unfair and possibly you will condemn the man who "wants it done." That thing will go on in thousands upon thousands of households and hospitals, because the smart alecks who started Mr. Roosevelt in that direction put him on the spot.

SYNOPSIS

Barbara Sentry, seeking to sober up her escort, Johnnie Boyd, on the way home from a party, slaps him, and attracts the attention of a policeman, whom she knocks down. As he arrests him, Professor Brace of Harvard comes to the rescue and drives Barbara home. On the way they see Barbara's father driving from the direction of his office.

"I'll have to admit," Brace said, "that you played the game! But if you're going to be so loyal, shouldn't you be specially careful in choosing your friends? Loyalty misplaced is pretty treacherous."

"Johnny always has behaved himself before. I don't care much for cocktails and wild parties; but there are certain things you do when you're on the deb list, you know. Mother wanted me to have one season of it," replied Barbara.

"Big dance at the Somerset, stag lines, all that sort of thing?" His tone was derisive.

"No, I just had a luncheon at home. Father's and mother's friends, and their families. Last March."

"Well, there's some sense to that."

She laughed faintly. "Oh, we're really a pretty sensible family," she assured him. "Perfectly respectable, honestly." There was amusement in her tones. "Of course we're in trade. Father and his father and grandfather before him. Fruit and things. Oranges from Florida and all that. I suppose you professors think business is a pity; but at least we're wholesale. That's something, isn't it?"

He chuckled. "Everything, I should say." And she exclaimed triumphantly, "There, I knew you could laugh if you tried!"

"But it seems such a waste of time for a girl to chase around to drunken parties—"

"Oh, don't be so worthy! Besides, it wasn't a drunken party. Johnny's foot slipped, that's all."

He said thoughtfully: "I know his kind; see them in class right along. But I don't know the girls they run around with. You're a new breed to me." He looked at her directly. "I come from a small mid-Western town," he explained. "Folks were church people. We didn't drink, or—dance much, or play cards. Of course, I know the standards I learned as a youngster are old-fashioned now. But—what have you put in place of them? What are you like? Girls your age, I mean? Yourself, and the girls you know?"

"We're a pretty decent lot," she assured him. "The people ten years older than us did run wild; but the girls I know don't drink too much, and they're level-headed and responsible. My older sister works every day in the hospital. She's going to marry a doctor and be a medical missionary. Mother does a lot of club work, things like that. We're the sort of family that doesn't get into the society columns very much. We don't telephone the editor every time we have people to dinner. But we're all right. Doing our jobs, behaving ourselves."

She hesitated, laughed a little. "I don't know why I'm telling you the story of my life—except that I sort of want you to—well, to not be so sure I'm just a crazy kid."

He said: "I don't! I did at first, naturally; but I can see you're—not as bad as I thought." He smiled. "I suppose yours is what we think of as a 'fine old Boston family.' Your father's turning at the next corner. Shall I follow him?"

"Let him go," Barbara directed. "We'll take the next turn. Yes, I suppose we are. I never thought much about it. My sister and I do the usual things. Of course my brother's in Yale instead of Harvard, but the Sentries have been Yale for a good many generations. And mother and father—"

"By the way," the professor suggested, "why not tell your father about this scrape tonight? I expect he'd like to feel that he had your confidence."

"No, he'd just disapprove and be stern," she said. "He's always been pretty strict with himself, and with us too. He keeps telling me how girls behaved when he was young!"

"It wasn't a bad way to behave!" She laughed. "I'll bet as many girls were kissed in buggies then as in automobiles now. Turn here, our house is two blocks ahead." And then she exclaimed: "That must be father just turning into our drive! He drove awfully slowly, didn't he? Switch off your lights. Stop in the street, and we'll wait till he has gone to bed."

They stopped in front of the house, hidden behind a high hedge, and Professor Brace stilled the engine. In the sudden silence they heard steps on gravel.

"He's coming back from the garage," she whispered; and a moment later: "There! He's opened the front door!" Light shone out, then was dark as the door closed again. "We'll wait until he's gone upstairs," she directed. "Do you mind?"

He did not mind. He asked where Johnny lived, how to get clothes to take him for his appearance in court in the morning. She gave him the number of Johnny's dormitory room. "But probably one of his room-mates will do it," she suggested. Then an upstairs light came on.

"There!" she said. "Father's undressing. He must have gone to the kitchen for something before he went upstairs." And when presently the light went out, "Now he's in bed!" She opened the car door. "You've really been awfully kind. Thanks a lot." She extended her hand.

He said: "See here, Miss Sentry. May I drop in, one of these days? I'd like to know you better."

Her eyes twinkled. "Then you don't think I'm hopeless?"

He chuckled. "Maybe I can reform you!"

"Do come. Sunday evening?"

"Thanks. Count on me. Good-night!"

Their hands clasped. He started the car and drove away; and Barbara, walking for silence's sake on tioned again between them. But the forgiveness, naturally, was only on the surface. Yet they continued to preserve the outward forms, even to sleep in beds side by side, so that not even the servants ever knew Mrs. Sentry thought this morning that her ancient tolerance had been repaid. Their lives had always been outwardly serene; were serene as they grew older now.

She rose, leaving Arthur abed; but while she was dressing, she heard him stirring, and called, "Thought you might want to sleep."

He said, "No," rather curtly.

"Do well last night? Have a good game?"

"Didn't hold any cards." The Thursday night bridge was in the nature of a tournament, four rubbers being played after dinner. He referred to this as he explained now: "They finished us off by half past ten. I hung around for a few minutes, and then came along home." He added: "And I forgot your package from Butler's, Ellen. They delivered it about four o'clock, but I left it on my desk at the office."

"It doesn't matter," she said. "Today will do." She repeated, "It doesn't matter at all," and she won-humor for the day. She had always administered praise to him like a medicine, skillfully.

The house was old, of brick, four-square, with a French roof, the slopes broken by gables that admitted light to the servants' quarters and storage rooms on the upper floor. It had been built by Arthur's grandfather, in what was at that time open country; but now it was crowded among others, most of them of a later period, and retained only a narrow area of lawn and garden, with room for a tennis court beside the garage in the rear. A sluggish stream meandered behind the garage at an angle across the rear of the lot; and there was a pergola of brick and stone behind the tennis court, built by Arthur's father, on the bank above the water where ducks came to feed. Rhododendrons ten or twelve feet high screened the house from the street in front, and there were hedges along the lot line on either side. Outside, the house was as it had been built, save for the English ivy which cloaked the walls; but inside there were changes. Arthur's mother, when she was mistress here, had torn out walls, installed bathrooms, dressing-rooms, closets; redecorated again and again.

Mary was at the table when Mr. and Mrs. Sentry entered the dining-room; rose punctiliously to greet them. She was a tall, lovely girl, her cheeks a little hollowed so that her cheekbones and the line of her jaw showed firmly; and her eyes were apt to be grave, even when she smiled. She wore this morning a suit of blue-gray homespun, and her father, seeing this, commented: "Looks as though you're dressed for business."

She nodded. "Yes," she agreed. "I'm going to the hospital." She spent part of every day there as a volunteer, tending convalescent patients, learning something of nursing and medicine in the process. The hospital was Mrs. Sentry's pet charity; but Neil Ray, rather than her mother, was responsible for the fact that Mary's interests were thus directed. Neil was studying medicine, planning to follow his father as a medical missionary in China; and he wanted Mary to marry him.

"I told him," she confessed to her mother the night he proposed to her, "that I was no kind of wife for any kind of missionary!" Yet she had thereafter plunged into this work, as though thus she might deserve him. That was months ago.

Mrs. Sentry had spoken her mind to Mary, with the frankness upon which she prided herself. "Ridiculous!" she said. "To go way off to China! And preposterous for him to let you humble yourself! You've lost your head over this young man."

But the only result of her advice had been to awaken in Mary a defensive and antagonistic attitude, make her increasingly critical toward them all. Thus she said to Mr. Sentry now: "And speaking of hospitals, you look as though you ought to be in one, father. Been burning the candle at both ends?"

"Had a bad night," he explained. "Lay awake, fighting to get to sleep, for hours."

"You don't look sleepy," Mary commented, in a dry, professional tone. "You look as though—well, as though your nerves were all shot." She smiled. "Probably liverish," she suggested. "Stick out your tongue!"

Mrs. Sentry said in a dry tone. "Mary, I'm beginning to object to this clinical atmosphere in the home."

"You find so many objectionable things about me lately, mother!"

"You Find So Many Objectionable Things About Me Lately, Mother!"

the turf beside the gravel drive, went toward the house.

She wondered why her father had been downtown so late tonight; wondered what time it was; looked at her watch.

It was quarter of one.

Mrs. Sentry, Barbara's mother, roused when her husband turned on the light in their bedroom and got into his bed beside hers. She did not fully wake; just asked drowsily, "Everything all right, Arthur?"

"Of course! Perfect!"

"What time is it?"

"Quarter past eleven," he said, and she heard the rustling of the paper as he began to read. She thought sleepily that he was home early. He always dined at the Club on Thursday evenings, with bridge before and after dinner; but usually he was later than that in coming home. He was still reading when she drifted back to sleep.

When Nellie knocked on the door at seven next morning, Mrs. Sentry had been some time awake, planning her day. The steamstair in the forenoon, lunch at Mrs. Furness' to hear Miss Glen speak, dinner at home this evening. Mr. Sentry did not rouse at Nellie's knock; and Mrs. Sentry saw that he lay on his side, his back toward her; and she noticed with a faint jealous resentment of his continued youthfulness that his tumbled dark hair was not yet thin even on the top of his head. They had been married all most thirty years. The children babies so short a time ago, were young men and women now. Mary, so like Mrs. Sentry herself, absorbed in her work at the Hospital, taking it with a severe seriousness.

Phil, a Junior at New Haven, closer to Mrs. Sentry than either of his sisters, apt to tease her about her pride, her high head. Barbara . . . Mrs. Sentry reflected now that Barbara, the youngest, was almost like a stranger in the family. Only between Barb and Phil, both with a gift for laughter, was there close abiding sympathy. Mrs. Sentry wondered—lying half asleep—what their other children would have been like if there had been others. But of course there could not be. She had, so far as outward appearances were concerned, forgiven Arthur that old offense readily enough. "At least," she told him icily, that day a few weeks before Barbara was born when he came to her in contrite confession, "there has been no scandal. I could not forgive a scandal. So, since no one knows—unless she—"

And the matter was never men-dered why she went to such pains to reassure him, realized that there was something like apprehension in his tone, as though he were afraid what she would say. She asked hurriedly, "Who did you play with?"

"Dean Hare," he said. "Against Carl Bettle and Bob Flood."

She came into his dressing-room, herself ready for the day, and watched him knot his tie, brush his hair, trim his mustache. "What a time you have with that, don't you?" she said, amused at his intensity as he leaned close to the mirror, his jaw depressed to draw his upper lip taut, holding his mustache flat with one finger while with many grimaces he trimmed its ragged edges.

He nodded, and put on coat and vest, stowed odds and ends in his pockets, said, "Well, ready?"

She felt tautness in him, a need for reassurance. "You look about twenty-five," she told him dutifully. "Not a day older than Mary. You make me feel as though I had four children instead of three!" He smiled; and she thought she had succeeded in putting him in better

Peasants of Poland Like Their Colors; Women Wear Mixtures of Bright Shades

In no corner of the world has modern fashion in dress made less headway than in the Polish countryside. The spinning wheel and the loom still hold their place of honor, and homespun still is the garb of 75 per cent of the peasants.

There are four main groups of peasant costumes in Poland. The two most striking are in and around Lowicz, and on the southeastern border of Poland among the Huculs. The others are to be found among the Gorals in the Zakopane district and in Upper Silesia, notes a writer in the Detroit News.

Lowicz skirts are made from the famous rainbow wool, showing wide stripes of orange and canary yellow, alternating with narrow strips of blacks and browns, violet and amaranth, rich chocolate hues, deep purples, green and rose. But yellow seems to prevail, a yellow as radiant as the California poppy. The fashion comes straight from the native soil, for the women weave just what they see through their door: long, narrow fields which at a distance look like vari-colored stripes on the landscape.

These women wear close fitting vests with horizontal stripes and their white linen blouses have loose sleeves, sometimes gayly embroidered.

The Huculs run to bright colors, which would be considered somber if compared with those of Lowicz. A unique feature is that the women wear aprons instead of skirts—one apron fore and another aft. The result is a close fitting garment with plenty of looseness for riding and mountain climbing. And this is being considered by stylists for sports wear as a variation on the couettes that have recently been the rage.

The sleeveless lambskin coats worn by these women also are adapted for winter sports. They usually are made with the fur side in, and the outer skin embroidered in gay colors. They give plenty of free arm play and keep the torso toasty warm. Hucul women wear them all winter in the icy mountain blasts.

Pulling a Jinrikisha

Pulling a jinrikisha is no easy job. The coolies start in the trade as small boys. Wiry and hardy, they can maintain a good pace for a whole day. But the continual strain on the chest and lungs makes itself felt. By middle-age, the coolies are worn out.

FARM TOPICS

GIVE FLOCKS BEST HOT WEATHER CARE

Ample Range, Shade, Green Feed Are Important.

By C. F. Parrish, Extension Poultryman, North Carolina State College, WNU Service.

Poultry authorities agree that adequate range, shade, and green feed are three essentials for well-managed flocks during the hot summer months.

When growers are ready to market their birds, those who have been careful to observe these essentials will find they have been well paid for their efforts.

Where home-mixed rations for pullets are used, the following growing mash is recommended: 35 pounds No. 2 yellow corn meal, 20 pounds No. 2 heavy oats finely pulverized, 12 pounds standard wheat bran, 4 pounds fish meal (55 per cent protein), 2 pounds meat meal (55 per cent protein), 2 pounds dried skim milk, 2 pounds ground limestone or oyster shell, 2 pounds bone meal, and one pound iodized table salt.

Farmers having an adequate supply of milk may omit the dried milk recommended in the above ration. Because it is a valuable food, milk should be given to poultry in some form.

However, when fed as a liquid, it should be placed in clean, easily accessible containers. Surplus milk should not be allowed to remain in the containers since it attracts flies.

Plenty of water should be available at all times. If possible, it should be kept in a shady place.

Along with the mash, birds should have all the grain they will eat each morning.

'Blind Staggers' Among Summer Horse Ailments

Hot weather is the time when the horse disease encephalomyelitis, sometimes called "blind staggers," "brain fever," or "sleeping sickness" is most likely to appear, says Dr. R. A. Craig, head of Purdue's veterinary department. The disease affects the nervous system of horses and mules. In recent years, especially during the summer months, it has caused serious losses in the West, Middle West, and several states along the Atlantic coast, but may strike anywhere.

It is an infectious disease and the symptoms generally occur in three phases. The first stage may escape notice as it usually is only a mild indisposition commonly accompanied with a rise in temperature. The second stage is characterized by distinct nervous symptoms which may or may not be accompanied with fever. In the last stage the horse may go down and be unable to rise, sometimes thrashing violently with the legs and head. Death usually follows when these symptoms develop.

Encephalomyelitis may be easily confused with other diseases, Doctor Craig points out. The symptoms are similar to other ailments of the central nervous system, and a veterinarian should be called at the first indication of sickness. Although the chances for cure are greatest in the early stages of the disease, there is no remedy effective in all cases.

Heat Affects Layers

It isn't fatigue from a long period of laying, but it is high temperatures that cause smaller egg size in pullets from spring through the rest of the year. Tests by Dr. E. C. Warren of Kansas State college's poultry department, show that where birds do not encounter maximum temperatures higher than 70 degrees, the maximum egg size is reached in July and August. Those birds subjected to high summer temperatures never reach the potential maximum egg size during the pullet year, except when they keep on laying very late in fall when temperatures drop. These Kansas results point to the need of protecting hens as far as possible from high summer temperatures, warns a writer in the Farm Journal. Not only do hens lay smaller eggs during heat waves, but the number of eggs goes down, too.

Time Ewes Carry Young

The length of time a ewe will carry young normally is approximately five months, varying from 143 to 152 days. If ewes are properly fed and cared for they will not need conditioning powders or tonics, advises an authority in the Rural New-Yorker. Good quality hay with a little grain for a few weeks before lambing will put them in good condition and milk flow. A good grain mixture is corn, 300; oats, 300; wheat bran, 300; linseed meal, 100 pounds. Thirty pounds of some good mineral mixture may be added with benefit, a good homemade one being iodized stock salt, 50; ground limestone, 100; steamed bonemeal, 100 pounds. Keep this before all stock at all times to eat as desired. If lambs are dropped in the late winter they may be let out on warm days in a few weeks.

Smart Dresses for Now and Later On

HERE are two perfectly charming fashions that will fill a definite place in your life if you make them up immediately in pretty cotton or cool silk. And they are so perfectly in key with future fashions that you should by all means repeat them later in fall and winter materials. You'll be surprised, when you study the detailed sew chart included in each pattern, how quickly and easily you can finish them. You don't need experience. Even beginners enjoy working with these simple patterns.

Tailored Dress of Pique.

If your daytime wardrobe needs replenishing for the remaining weeks of summer, make this nice tailored dress of pique or gingham, and see how refreshed and comfortable you'll feel. Later on, wear it for fall in challis, jersey, or flat crepe. The short sleeves, easy waistline and action pleats in the skirt make this dress very easy to work in—and the deeply notched collar and patch pockets give it finish enough so that it is appropriate for street wear, too.

Tiny-Waisted Afternoon Dress.

Here's the type of dress that all important fashion sources show for fall! The shaped, rather high square neckline, the short sleeves, puffed at the top, the gathers that give you flattering bust fullness and the very, very small waist—these are all new notes. Just five steps, too, in the sew chart. For immediate wear, make it up in dotted Swiss or voile. Your fall version should be thin wool, crepe de chine or rayon jersey.

HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste

Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance.

You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

GEORGE DESIN CORONER and PUBLIC ADMINISTRATOR

To the Voters of Santa Clara County

The issues involved in the contest for the position of Coroner and Public Administrator are simple.

If you believe that a change for the better is needed in that office you have your choice of six candidates.

If you believe that the Coroner should be an undertaker your choice is limited to three of these six—Mr. Dowdle, Mr. Williams and Mr. O'Brien.

If, on the other hand, you believe THAT YOUR CORONER SHOULD NOT BE IN ANY WAY CONNECTED WITH THE UNDERTAKING BUSINESS, then your choice must lie between Mr. Desin, Mr. Provenzano and Mr. Anthes.

Would you vote for a candidate for Sheriff who announced his intention to conduct a grocery store in conjunction with the Sheriff's office, or an aspirant for the position of County Clerk who intended to run a garage as a side line?

DO YOU BELIEVE, AS I DO, THAT A PUBLIC OFFICIAL SHOULD DEVOTE ALL OF HIS TIME AND ALL OF HIS ENERGY TO THE CONDUCT OF THE OFFICE TO WHICH HE HAS BEEN ELECTED?

Mancuso Raps Private Practice In D. A.'s Office

"To assure the best service to the public, the doctors who work for Santa Clara county are prohibited from accepting private cases," said Peter J. Mancuso, candidate for district attorney. "This efficient plan is in effect regarding lawyers in our neighboring counties. One county of comparable size prohibits private practice in the district attorney's office and maintains an enviable record of prosecution with a staff of three deputies."

"In Santa Clara county six deputies are paid adequate salaries from the county treasury and yet they carry on private practice in the court house." "No attorney, said Mancuso, "can divide his time between his duty as a county officer and his private business and fulfill completely the duties to his office."

"It is time to remove this burden from the taxpayers. If the six deputies here who receive an ample monthly salary from the county have time to carry on private practice, then there are too many deputies," said Mancuso. "By eliminating several of these 'graft' positions, and prohibiting the remaining deputies from private practice, efficiency will be established and waste curtailed."

Peter J. Mancuso, a native of San Jose considers himself to be the only candidate who promises to establish this honest usage of county money. If elected district attorney he assures the taxpayers an efficient, honest 100 per cent county office free from optical pressure or control.

"ALIEN CORN" AT ALCAZAR

Sidney Howard, brilliant playwright, was impressed with a few beautiful lines he found in Keats' "Ode To A Nightingale" and as a result the powerful drama "Alien Corn," which opened at the Alcazar in San Francisco Monday night, was written.

"Through the sad heart of Ruth when, sick for home, She stood in tears amid the alien corn."

Mr. Howard has placed his Ruth as a teacher of music in a girl's college in a mid-western state. She, with her father, are in a strange land longing to be back in her home to follow up a career in music but are exiled by war. The personnel of the immediate group in which she finds herself is the faculty of the school. Love lets fly a dart that involves the affairs of Elsa, a professor and the presi-

Spalding Makes Bid On Record Of Past 4 Years

Standing on his record of the past four years, Coroner Charles C. Spalding comes before the voters at the primaries next Tuesday, asking their support of his candidacy for a second term, and basing his plea on the grounds that according to official records the coroner's office has been conducted more economically, efficiently and with better service to the public than at any time in its history.

Spalding stresses the fact that he has actually saved the taxpayers in the last fiscal year, July 1, 1937 to June 30, 1938, the sum of $4529.90, which he says represents the largest single amount saved in one fiscal year in the history of the coroner's office, in accordance with the increase of population in the county.

"As coroner and public administrator, I have devoted my entire time to the administration of the office," Spalding says. "I have given the public a full 24-hour service throughout the year. My policy has been, and is, one of highest efficiency, courtesy, sympathetic interest, economy and attention to business. I have no other occupation, nor am I devoting any of my official time to some private or personal enterprise. I am a full-time coroner, which I sincerely believe is what the people want."

New Telephone Book Almost Ready for Press

A new telephone directory for this community will shortly go to press, according to H. V. Mann, local manager for the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company, who urges persons contemplating changes in their listings or new installations to make their arrangements promptly.

Revisions of present listings will be included in the new book, if received at the telephone business office on or before September 12, as will listings of telephones installed by that date, Mann said.

Delivery of the new directory is scheduled for the week of Oct. 5.

BAD BUSINESS

Using a public office for private gain is bad business—and bad government!

A profit for racketeering is a loss for decent government, a loss in respect for the integrity of our public institutions. The damage done is far more irreparable than the loss in funds government may have sustained through corrupt practices. One is replaceable. The other is not.

This week while racket-buster Dewey seeks to expose the devious threads linking a corrupt political machine to the underworld in New York, California contemplates an unsavory scandal of her own involving charges of racketeering, collusion in the sale of state oil without bids, and gross misuse of public office.

Decent management and a conscientious personnel in our public agencies is essential, but can it be achieved without a vigorous house-cleaning? If, as Lt. Governor Hatfield urges, a new and needed respect for government and honest statesmanship is to be established, then we must abolish graft and the spoils system with all possible speed and thoroughness.

Commonsense endorses the governorship candidate's assertion that good government can be furthered by an extension of civil service, on a personnel of men and women chosen by merit instead of by patronage. Good government can also be built by officials who pledge themselves ever to seek re-election.

It can never be built on political patronage!

This is the day a militant Germany, armed to the teeth and engaged in spectacular war maneuvers, is supposed to leap at the throat of the dove of peace, and leave its bleeding wings strewn on Czechoslovakia's soil.

August 15, said the confidential whispers, was The Day! It came. It went. Nothing happened. Now the date has been advanced. This time put the red ring around September 15, diplomatic sources advise.

Perhaps this is all midsummer night's madness. Tired, jittery, shell-shocked Europe is a suitable haven for nightmares these anxious days.

WHERE THE MONEY GOES

The National Industrial Conference Board, one of the most trustworthy of the nation's research bodies, has just filed a telling answer to that important question, "Where does industry's money go?"

If any one truth emerges from its significant study of the income and outgo of American business, it is that Labor has a bigger stake in the welfare of business than any other single group.

Should the organizations which supply work, wages, and security to millions succumb to the punishing blows of super-regulation and over-taxation, the textile industry with 1,500,000 workers, local and national retail chains with their 960,000 employees, the iron and steel industries with their 775,000 wage-earners could not continue to function long. That may be of small concern to those bent on sapping the job-making strength of industry, or abolishing the $250,000,000 in savings passed on to consumers yearly through the mass distribution of goods. It is, however, of prime concern to those who hold the jobs, the millions who need those savings. The size of their stake is made vividly clear by the conference report.

In 1935, American industry had a total income of $11 billion after debts, taxes and depreciation had been accounted for. Of this 11 billion, 73.3 per cent, or over 8 billion, went to wage-earners! To stockholders, including employees' pension funds, insurance companies, banks, and small investors, fell 19.3 per cent. The rest went to management. This is where the money goes, this is why wage-earners profit when industry prospers.

SAY IT WITH BALLOTS

In less than a week's time, California candidates for state and national offices streak down a fast track toward the hurdles of the primary election.

Whoever falls—and fall, some of them must!—they will not lack spectators. Registration for this primary, topping the three and a half million mark, has broken all previous records.

Let the number of those voting also prove a record breaker! On August 30, every registered citizen has first choice in naming his man. November's nominee may be only second choice, if voters fail to support their favorites next Tuesday. There's only one way to do it. Say it with ballots.

"PAID IN FULL!"

The high cost of local relief in 1933 is still an unpaid bill in 1938! Nearly one-fourth of California's counties have failed to receive their portion of the state's gasoline tax fund for the current quarter. The funds due them were applied, instead, to loans made these counties five years ago to first-aid to relievers.

It takes a heap of funds to foot the expenses local government is forced to run up in a period of rising relief costs.

For this reason the state budget for 1937-39 has reached a new high for grants-in-aid to local communities, with over half the total budget allocated for that purpose! The unpaid bills of '33 make timely reminders that the road to California's prosperity does not lie down a spendthrift alley.

There's up-to-the-minute wisdom in the old-fashioned advice endorsed by the bulk of California's tax-paying public, "Write paid in full across present debts before writing I. O. U.'s across new ones!"

We didn't visit Dogpatch, Li'l Abner's famed hometown, or Van Buran, where Bob Burns' relatives live, but we did look over Pine-ridge, center of the Lum and Abner radio series. We met Lem Wortell, Lum and Abner's business competitor in the story. Wortell explained to us that nearly all of the characters depicted in the radio skit are residents of Pine-ridge, which has a population of about 12.

The following night we spent at Hot Springs National park, which includes the large city of Hot Springs and very little park. The park is famed for its mineral springs. Here we saw fireflies for the first time. The fireflies were as thick as the mosquitoes that we have on hot summer nights in Campbell and much more agreeable to have around.

Williams Believes
Undertaker Best
For Coroner

In this, the last week of the primary election campaign, Amos O. Williams has stressed in talks before groups and messages he outlined for the radio the importance of placing the responsible job of coroner in the hands of an undertaker, trained in taking proper charge at time of death. "The fact that a connection with an undertaking establishment is compulsory is proved," Mr. Williams declared, "by the fact that the main telephone of the coroner, even during the past four years under a non-undertaker coroner, has been in an undertaking establishment. It is inescapable, for no facilities and no paid personnel are provided for the coroner. And bodies of deceased persons must be cared for. It's an undertaker's job."

The fairness of the situation was explained by the statement that "in 95 per cent of cases, relatives express their wishes as to where bodies shall be taken for funeral services, and I have always adhered faithfully and honestly to their wishes without attempt to dissuade them from the funeral home of their choice. This causes a natural, logical and fair distribution of cases. Of the remaining five per cent of cases, three per cent are indigent cases from which no undertaker can profit. This leaves only two per cent for impartial alphabetical distribution by the coroner. My record of fairness in this regard has always been above reproach," Mr. Williams said.

ELECT JUDGE PERCY

O'CONNOR

SUPERIOR JUDGE

In view of repeated charges by CIO organizers, pro-labor urban newspapers and certain government officials that California farm wages and farm housing accommodations are "a disgrace to the state," it is to be hoped that a recent article released by Employment Service News, official publication of the United States Employment Service, will be given wide circulation.

Written by W. V. Allen, supervisor of the Farm Placement Service for the federal employment agency, the article discusses California's migratory labor problem thoroughly and intelligently. And in summary it makes this unequivocal statement:

"Despite reports to the contrary, agriculture in California has been kind to its workers. It pays the highest wage of any agricultural state in the nation. In most cases, it furnishes very good housing facilities to its migratory workers."

Then, digging into the present problem, resulting from the flood of refugees pouring into this state from other areas, the report observes:

"We believe that California farmers generally wish to maintain their high wage scale, but unless and until this wholesale migration of indigent workers to the state stops, with its attendant ramifications in the spreading of disease and the resultant burden of possible increased taxation upon our growers to care for these people, fair agricultural wages cannot prevail."

And then, spiking the oft-reiterated charge that California agriculture prompted the invasion of migrants by advertising for workers in the middle-west and other sections, the federal official reports:

"California farmers have been blamed unjustifiably for the unprecedented influx of agricultural workers to the state during the past few years. It has been alleged that growers in certain areas of California have advertised for labor in the Dust Bowl area. But at the instigation of the Farm Placement Service in California, thorough investigation of these statements has been made. Directors of State Employment Services in the middle west, in their desire to give us complete cooperation, have had newspapers throughout their states searched for such ads, but to date not even one advertisement of that nature has been found. We believe responsibility for the influx lies not with our growers, but with individual farm laborers, who as we have pointed out, have come here from other states, and, having been able to maintain themselves, have written to friends and relatives at home, exaggerating the ease with which they have found work or have secured relief, to the end that their friends and relatives will join them here."

Tracing the start of "the new gold rush" to California, the federal official relates:

"In 1935, farm workers in ever-increasing numbers invaded California. They came from all sections of the United States, but principally from the so-called drought states. They were attracted to California by the higher farm wages paid in this state; by better living conditions and housing accommodations furnished by growers; by the fact that California's agriculture is a year-round activity; by the more liberal relief policies of the California State Relief Administration and by the higher security wage paid by the Works Progress Administration in this state."

"In 1936, according to the reports from border quarantine stations, 97,642 people entered California by automobile in search of manual employment. Many were experienced agricultural workers."

"In 1937, some 104,976 people entered the state. Again a majority were from the drought area."

Then, pointing the problem, Mr. Allen notes: "These out-of-state people, destitute and desperate for work, were on hand when agricultural jobs were available, and were willing to work for less than the going wage. The result again was that many of California's own agricultural workers were obliged to seek public relief. The prospect for the balance of 1938 is not bright. . . . And pointing the danger of boosting California's old-age pension payments to too-attractive levels, he observes: "Out of state people have been quick to recognize the advantages to be had as residents of the state in the old-age benefits paid in California. It appears now that it is their desire to have their relatives and close friends established in California so as to be eligible for these benefits. Many of them have been here for the past three to five years and, having established residence, have fared better than they would have at home. Now, happy in their present conditions, they fail to see that the employment situation becomes increasingly acute and that their relatives and friends at home, in all probability, would not find employment so readily, should they, too, migrate to California."

There is much food for thought in this analysis released by the United States Employment Service. But there is little ammunition for the critics of California agriculture. Fortunately, the Farm Placement Service has undertaken the job of warning the people in other sections of the United States not to come to California in search of employment. It is to be hoped that their work will be successful and that other federal agencies will assist them.

It's The Record That Counts

Looking through the Official Files of the Coroner's Office, we find comparative figures of UTMOST INTEREST TO THE TAXPAYERS, as follows:

During the last fiscal year (1933-1934) that the predecessor (we'll call him "The PROVEN Candidate" for convenience) of Coroner Spalding held office, he handled:

289 Coroner cases, on an allowed Budget of $10,478.24,
or at$36.26 per case

Coroner Spalding during the past fiscal year (1937-1938) handled 467 Coroner cases, on an allowed Budget of $12,406.69, or at$26.56 per case

So Coroner Spalding ACTUALLY SAVED$ 9.70 per case

By applying simple multiplication, we have:
467 times $9.70=$4529.90

In other words, these OFFICIAL comparative figures prove that Coroner Spalding SAVED THE TAXPAYERS in ONE year, from July 1, 1937, to June 30, 1938, the tidy sum of $4529.90, more than "The PROVEN Candidate" did in his last fiscal year in office, from July 1, 1933, to June 30, 1934. And this sum represents—

THE LARGEST SINGLE AMOUNT SAVED IN ONE FISCAL YEAR IN THE HISTORY OF THE CORONER'S OFFICE, IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE INCREASE IN POPULATION

This is NOT an idle campaign statement which cannot be PROVEN

It's in the OFFICIAL RECORDS, and we cordially invite the public to visit the Coroner's Office and look over these records.

Bill Emig's List Of Qualifications For Sheriff

For the benefit of those of you who may not know William J. Emig and his splendid record as a peace officer, it gives us great pleasure as a committee working in behalf of his candidacy for sheriff of this county, to present you with a brief outline of the man who has been in the public eye upward of 25 years.

Bill Emig began serving the public as night-watchman, then marshal of Santa Clara. Later he became a member of the San Jose Police department, assigned to the motorcycle squad.

Shortly afterwards he rose to the rank of captain, and while acting in that capacity he conceived a plan that was to save the lives of more school children than had ever been accomplished in the long history of modern police work.

In 1930, the people of Santa Clara county, recognizing his ability and natural talents, elected Bill Emig as their sheriff. His honesty and efficiency while in office remain unquestioned.

Bill Emig seeks your vote. He assures the people that if elected sheriff of this county, he will fulfill, in every respect, their expectations and wishes—that the sheriff's office will be conducted efficiently, courteously, economically and free of political influence. Vote for him!

★ Movie Lure
★ March Comeback
★ Bing's Song
—By Virginia Vale—

PERHAPS you, the public, hadn't realized it, but you have been staying away from the movies in such stupendous numbers that the motion picture industry is about to spend $1,000,000 to lure you back into the theaters again.

Producers, distributors and theater men will put up the money. And you will get $250,000 of it, my friends. There will be a contest. At present, although the rules have not yet been decided on, it seems likely that this contest will be in the form of a questionnaire based on pictures released between now and October 31.

Booklets containing rules will be issued only at theater box-offices. Each contestant will have to answer 30 questions about 30 different pictures in order to qualify.

Half of that $1,000,000 will be spent on advertising in newspapers and magazines.

Fredric March is going to try, try again—and if he fails this time, no doubt he'll keep on trying—to make a come-back on the stage. Last year he and his wife, Florence Eldridge, backed a play that was produced in New York, you'll recall, and it failed—not because of their performances, but just because it wasn't an awfully good play.

If they can find a play that they like, they'll do it again, come autumn. In the meantime, he's storing up more of what it takes to produce plays by working in Hal Roach's "There Goes My Heart."

It looks as if Myron Selznick had started something that may result in our having better pictures. He has formed a partnership with various prominent actors, writers and directors—as the best theatrical agent in Hollywood he knew all of them—to make pictures, with a share of the pictures' profits taking the place of salary. Ernst Lubitsch Productions, Inc., is the first of these producing units.

Under this arrangement, a picture will have to be good—or else!

The Stroud twins traveled a long and winding road, so far as their career was concerned, before they reached those Sunday evening broadcasts where they share honors with Charlie McCarthy. They began as acrobats with a circus; ran away from home to do it. Then they went into vaudeville, and switched to dancing. They toured this country, then Australia, New Zealand and the South Seas before returning to Broadway, and switched their act again, this time to the sort of thing you hear them doing on the air.

Here's something new under the sun. Practically all of the big publishers of popular music want a certain song, and can't have it. The song is "Hail KMH," the theme-song introduction to those dialogues between Bing Crosby and Ken Carpenter. It was written especially for the broadcasts, and that's that even if it has become such a hit that the song publishers are itching to get it into general circulation.

ODDS AND ENDS—Their friends are still hoping that Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone may patch up their marriage; at present, though not likely, it seems possible. . . . At least, Joan says she doesn't plan a divorce, ever. . . . Ben Bernie and Kay Kyser have been invited to lecture before the New York University Radio Workshop. . . . Walt Disney has bought 55 acres of land near Hollywood and will build a $1,000,000 studio there—thanks to Mickey Mouse, Snow White and others. . . . Al Jolson and Edward G. Robinson will be back on the air September 20—meanwhile Al is indulging his passion for seeing fast horses run just. . . . Eddie Cantor's next picture will be "Mr. Average Man."

As to Knitting a Chic Fall Sweater

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT'S time to knit! Or do you happen to be a crocheter instead of a knitter? Either way you do it, it's time to make one of the perfectly charming sweaters here pictured.

We'll wager that at sight of these ultra chic and fascinating sweater fashions your fingers will begin to tingle, your heart action quicken as a sudden urge sweeps over you to clickety click those knitting needles of yours faster than they ever clicked before. Or, if perchance, it's a crochet needle you wield, we've an idea it's going to go at rapid pace to complete a "darling" sweater like the crocheted model shown above to the right in the illustration, for of course you will be wanting to have it ready to wear with the new fall suit. The other two sweaters in the picture are knitted.

We agree with you, this trio of hand-made sweaters certainly have a chic and charm about them that is far beyond the ordinary. Not that there is anything complicated about the knitting and crocheting of 'em, for each of the models is really very simple to make.

"Sweaters this year," comes word from Paris, "will be new because of their departure from the conventional." Short, just over the hipbone is the foreword that reaches us in regard to the new fall sweaters. Many are slide fastened for mostly everything is being zippered among the new fashions that can be zipped. The majority of new sweaters have low necks.

The band-and-bow trim that gives such dainty feminine detail to the sweater pictured above to the right in the group is definitely new. It affords a grand opportunity to carry out a two-color scheme which is something to take note of, considering that bicolor treatments are highly important in the current stylizing program. The three bands of contrasting color are fastened with bows made of tufts of fringe formed of the identical mercerized crochet cotton used to make the sweater. You'll love this band-and-bow trimming the more you wear your sweater.

The jacket-like sweater blouse above to the left has that air of sophisticated simplicity about it that every woman versed in the art of smart costume covets. It is knit of knit-cro-shewn in an openwork stitch interspersed with solid blocks that gives a sort of plaided effect. This sweater is the type that looks just as well when you remove your jacket as it does with the jacket on. Make it up in one of the lovely new muted colors and you will find it an indispensable and flattering accessory. The square neck line is a high-style feature. So also are the crochet buttons up the front. Most fashion reports have much to say in regard to the flair for buttons running to larger rather than small this season.

With word emanating from Paris that "it's a year for sweaters in versatile styles," cardigans get headline attention. Variety in cardigan styles is the new mandate, but it must be "variety without fussiness." A cardigan type that embodies all of Paris' sweater dictates is the short-sleeved one shown below. It is knit and crocheted of lustrous mercerized cotton. Work it up in a contrast of your two favorite colors.

SUMMER ERMINE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

In the way of a summer evening wrap the short fur, feather or marabou bolero ranks at the top of the list, making an agreeable change from the fashionable cape. The one pictured is in natural beige summer ermine, worn over a white crepe frock with accordion pleated skirt. The smart young women who go to parties and such adore these boleros. The bolero in brown fur (very important for fall) is forecast as a smart daytime item.

Brushed-Up Coiffures Now Go With Doll-Sized Hats

It seems as if the idea of brushed-up hair is gaining, whether we like it or no. At any rate buyers returning from midsummer trips report that they will show the new tiny doll-sized hats launched by Schiaparelli, worn atop higher hair-dress that brings curls up off the ears. It remains to be seen how well the fashion will "take." You never can tell, fickle fashion, fickle public are apt to go to any extreme.

PART FABRIC, PART KNIT NEW FORMULA

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

College girl, here's your cue to smartness in dress this fall. Which is to the effect that the sweater and the cloth skirt in accurate color match is a fashion "must" this coming season. So there's lots of fun ahead matching a sweater knit of shetland, cashmere or angora wool to the skirt of patterned tweed, or if you prefer, a monotone wool of plain or novelty weave. Your choice runs from rich dark autumn tones to the now-so-fashionable pastel colors.

Then there are those amazing three-piece ensembles that employ the identical yarn employed in knitting the sweater, as is used for weaving the cloth for jacket and skirt. There's no-end chic in the costumes of cloth that have short fur jackets with sleeves and borderings, knit of yarn in colors that tune to the scheme of things.

Cerise Added to Popular Pinks by Paris Stylist

Cerise is a new step on the ladder of pinks. A pleasant variation of the more purplish fuchsia shade, the cerise is used by Lelong for a flowing sash tying around a deep blue evening gown with a halter neck.

Adding Bright Touch

Flowers on the bodice of an evening frock matched by flowers in the hair supply all the decoration that one could want for festive occasions.

Moldy Colors

Moldy colors are being proudly displayed at the moment as being high style.

C. Houston Goudiss Explains the Causes of Food Allergy

Well-Known Food Authority Names the Foods That Cause Trouble

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th St., New York City.

A NEW phrase has crept into daily usage in recent years, has in fact become so common that comedians use it in jest and draw laughs from their audiences when they mimic, "I'm allergic!" But the words have deep significance for perhaps 30 to 60 per cent of the population who have cause to agree with the old saying that "one man's meat is another man's poison."

They are victims of the curious phenomenon known as food allergy and have an abnormal reaction to the proteins in certain foods and other substances. As a result, foods which are beneficial in themselves and which usually have an important place in a normal balanced diet, cause a variety of unpleasant effects.

These may range from hives or a skin rash to a gastric disturbance with spells of nausea. The individual may suffer from migraine headache or an attack of hay fever or asthma; or he may have a tendency to what appears to be bronchial or head colds.

It has been determined that these symptoms in an individual who is allergic are due to intolerance of certain proteins. Even when the offending foods are fruits and vegetables, it is the protein that is responsible. It has been suggested that the sensitization results because at some previous time, an unsplit or undigested protein in some way passed through the membranes lining the digestive tract and entered the blood stream. This acted very much like a foreign substance and sensitized body cells in some way so that whenever the same food is eaten, the disturbing symptoms occur as a sort of defense mechanism.

This acted very much like a foreign substance and sensitized body cells in some way so that whenever the same food is eaten, the disturbing symptoms occur as a sort of defense mechanism.

Heredity a Factor

A tendency to allergy seems to be inherited. But the substances which caused a disturbance differ with each individual, and the type of reaction also differs. For example, a mother may be allergic to milk; her child inheriting the tendency may be allergic to fish. Drinking milk may give the mother an attack of asthma; eating fish may cause the child to break out with hives.

It is difficult to generalize regarding the foods that cause trouble, because they vary so widely among individuals who are sensitized, and often one person is sensitized to a number of foods. It has been found that the foods most frequently causing allergic symptoms include wheat, milk, eggs, chocolate, pork, fish and shellfish, tomatoes, cauliflower, cabbage, strawberries and oranges.

Skin rashes are believed to be caused most frequently by hypersensitivity to milk, cereal or pork. Hives are reported to occur often from eating strawberries, chocolate, fish and tomatoes. Wheat is frequently an offender in migraine headaches. Asthma seems to be common in persons who are sensitive to milk, eggs and butter.

Other Offending Substances

Foods are not always responsible for allergy, and the symptoms may be produced by contact with wool, feathers, dust, pollen, dander from horses or other animals; or even the sting of a bee.

Discovering the Offenders

The ideal procedure for the allergy victim is to find out the offending foods or substances and avoid them. For early recognition of a tendency to allergy may prevent discomfort and trouble.

There are two ways to discover the trouble makers. One is to learn by experience, either by keeping a record of the foods eaten and noting the appearance of symptoms, or by eliminating from the diet, first one and then another of the foods that are suspected of causing difficulty. The other is to let your doctor conduct simple skin tests. Small scratches are made on the arms and legs, and each scratch touched with a solution made of the protein of a food or substance known to cause trouble. If a person is allergic to that substance, the skin around the scratch swells and becomes inflamed. The inflammation disappears after a few hours and causes no pain or inconvenience.

Other Foods Must Be Used

Once the offending food or foods are determined, they should be eliminated either for all time or until the individual becomes desensitized. If the trouble maker is an uncommon food, such as lobster or clams, the allergy presents no great problem, but when children react to necessary foods such as milk, eggs and wheat, the homemaker faces a difficult task.

When milk is the offending food, it must be avoided, not only as a beverage, but in bread, cakes and puddings. Sometimes dried or evaporated milk, goat's milk or soy bean milk may be used instead. When wheat is the trouble maker, the alternatives include cornstarch, rice flour, potato or rye flour; rice and corn cereals; tapioca or barley. When hen's eggs are injurious, duck's eggs can sometimes be used with success, or meat or fish may be substituted.

Sometimes after a period of exclusion, an immunity is built up so that later the foods may be reintroduced gradually into the diet.

Don't Jump to Conclusions

It must be borne in mind that many of the symptoms produced by food sensitivity may also result from other causes. For this reason, it is unwise to decide that one is allergic without due investigation. Nor must the imagination or the current widespread discussion of the subject be allowed to cause adults or children to mask their unwillingness to eat certain foods with the false notion that they are unduly sensitive.

On the other hand, homemakers should be sympathetic with both children and adults who say with good cause, "I can't eat that!" And it would appear that there may even be some compensation in this unpleasant situation. For a group of scientists who have studied the subject announced a few years ago that those who belong to the allergy group appear to have a definite capacity for becoming intellectually superior. Thus, the child who suffers from a skin rash or stuffy nose today, due to food sensitivity, is apt to be full of energy when he reaches manhood and exhibit unusual ability for cultural leadership.
